“Can We Keep Our Glaucoma Patients Happy?”

I. Paul Singh, M.D.
1 hour GL
Grand Salon

One of the most important issues we face in the medical management of glaucoma is patient compliance. Due to the asymptomatic nature of glaucoma, maintaining patients on a drug regimen for an extended period of time is challenging and a large part of the art of managing glaucoma patients. It is also difficult to maintain adequate patient follow up and patient satisfaction. We will discuss the various barriers to compliance i.e. education, cost, co-morbidities, drug regimen, and drug side effects, and will describe studies, clinical tools and techniques to improve long term compliance.

AND

“24 Hour IOP Control - Not Just An Office Hours Disease”

I. Paul Singh, M.D.
1 hour GL
Grand Salon

Maintaining good IOP control has been the mainstay of our glaucoma treatment. Our office IOP measurements only measure IOP during the diurnal period. Recent studies have demonstrated a large number of patient exhibit fluctuation in IOP during non office hours i.e. over the nocturnal period. We will discuss studies demonstrating the importance of controlling IOP during non office hours and clinical options currently available to control IOP over a 24 hour period. We will also focus on new technologies and devices on the horizon to measure IOP 24 hours a day and allow patients to record these measurements at home. This information will better allow clinicians to understand why certain patients may progress despite adequate IOP control in the office.
